

I am concerned that if the new broadcast service Low Power FM (LPFM) is given priority over the current FM translator service that current stations heard through FM translators could be forced off the air. One of these stations is K-LOVE. Some people believe that there is little value in national or regional services such as K-LOVE but I disagree strongly. Including myself, there are hundreds of thousands of people that listen to stations such as K-LOVE. Stations such as K-LOVE provide family friendly programming that many other stations do not provide. It is very important that there are radio stations that provide positive and encouraging messages through music and other programs. Whenever I am able to get K-LOVE's signal on my radio it is one of my top choices to listen to and this is true for many of my family members and friends. Please do not expand the service of LPFM stations and allow them to take priority over current FM translator service.
